1. Segment Revenue Model & Employee Roles

Segment	Website Description	Revenue Model	What Employees Actually Do
Broking	WEBSITE "broking commission based on the value of the freight, the hire or the asset" (for derivatives: commission on contract value, or a fixed fee per contract)	Commission-based	WEBSITE 3 job families: Shipbrokers (connect owners with charter/purchase counterparties; relationship-building & sales) · Operators (coordinate voyage execution after a deal is agreed) · Analysts (collect/analyse market data, maintain databases)
Financial	WEBSITE Investment banking & project finance services — "commissions and fees" for risk management, funding arrangement, and transaction facilitation	Commission + fees	WEBSITE Centred on data analysis plus building client relationships around debt/equity financing solutions
Support (Port Services)	WEBSITE "fixed agency fees and revenue from the sales of supplies" — port agency, project logistics, freight forwarding, warehousing, crew travel, industrial supplies	Fixed agency fees + supply sales	WEBSITE Port agency operations, customs clearance, warehouse support — emphasis on adaptability ("thinking on your feet"), managing client logistics
Research	WEBSITE "digital offerings, typically recurring, alongside... data feeds, consultancy, valuations and market reports"	Recurring digital subscriptions + consultancy/data feeds	WEBSITE Collects, validates and analyses shipping intelligence used by governments and the financial sector; communicates findings via reports/presentations

Note — Additional Organisations Outside the 4 Reporting Segments (not part of Note 4)

- Technology — a cross-functional support organisation (business analysts/developers/designers) building the digital tools used across business lines, including Broking. Not described as a revenue-generating segment in its own right.
- Business Support — HR, finance, legal, marketing. Back-office functions unrelated to segment revenue.

[Website] The content of this table is quoted directly from Clarksons' official website (investor pages + careers pages) — not from the Annual Report or Interim Results Announcement. As marketing/recruitment copy rather than audited or reviewed financial statements, it is not used as a basis for investment-analysis conclusions — qualitative background only.

Broking's "Becoming a broker" page and the Clarksons Securities (Financial) careers page were checked directly but consist mainly of recruitment language with almost no day-to-day detail, so they were not included in the table. The Early Careers main page was the most substantive source found.
